Gal About Hollywood

By MARGARET MORTON MCKAY

The year 1951 was Alan Ladd's year. He won the Modern Screen popularity poll, one of the biggest magazine surveys in the country, and was chosen the most cooperative actor of the year by the Hollywood Women's Press Club. Being chosen as the most cooperative by the professional writing and publicity group connected with the motion picture industry was a vote of appreciation and a salute to Alan's popularity with co-workers. Thus the Paramount star was most popular with fans and also with those who work along with him.

Alan and his wife, Sue Carol, were so grateful for the Golden Apple Award from the ladies of the press that they in turn gave a party and little golden apple ash trays and cigarette holders to the gals. Their charming house still decorated with Christmas festivities, was the locale and it was a warm and beautiful party.

Only three men were there besides Alan and he was pretty glad to see the masculine touch inasmuch as there were over a hundred females. One of the men brought Dorothy Lamour, who was the Club's most cooperative actress two years ago. Dorothy's husband, Bill Howard, at Alan's urging, stayed on and boosted the star's morale. Ken McEldowney, president of the Oriental-International Films who made "The River" in India, arrived to pick up his wife, who is one of the club members, and stayed on to add to the fun. The third male was Alan's doctor! We kept wondering if Alan was afraid his pulse beat would go too fast with so many femmes around.

Sue wore an apricot velvet dress with a little capelet and her hot canapes were wonderful. Tiny hamburgers about the size of your thumb on toast, minced turkey in little hot biscuits, hot chesnes and a variety of other delicious foods filled the candle light buffet table. Waiters served them around through the various rooms on silver trays.

The Ladds have one of the most exquisite homes of all the film stars. The house is in rich and beautiful colors, the landscaping, the setting and the complete comfort of the house is outstanding even in a town where homes are fairly elegant. A tiny life size stone fawn lies on the side of the front door step as you enter. It's so life-like you think, for a moment, that it is real if you haven't been there before.

The Ladds are home folks. They spend most of their free time at home and do their entertaining there. The house is made for just such a purpose. You seldom see them in night clubs.
